

Advice for a lasting relationship?

Asked at Saturday Farmers' Market

Communication is really important. If you're mad, don't just give up and go hide in your corner. Talk ... and see if you can get to a mutual midpoint that works for both of you.

Be respectful, open-minded, and do a lot of things together. Go places, visit other countries and have fun. My husband and I have been married for 39 years and that's what we do.

Richard Sunderman
registered nurse

Spend as much time with your spouse or significant other as possible. Carving out time with each other leads to longevity.

Patty Sunderman

Maintain honesty in your relationship and always consult your partner with any financial decisions you might make.
