I'm actually really impressed. I was in Paradise last Tuesday and I was really blown away by how much recovery and work has been done. I'm so proud of this community. Everyone wants to see all those who lost their homes be embraced and healed.

I feel as though it's going pretty slow. They're not getting much built, and the homeless population is just growing more and more.

I feel like the local area supported the victims a lot. They've helped each other out with housing, food, clothing, etc. I feel like we're recovering from it very well.

I feel like the community members have banded together really well. They brought people in and supported each other. Everyone both in and out of the area has been very supportive.
