My favorite, and probably most underrated, album ever is Montrose by the band Montrose. It's got "Rock Candy," "Bad Motor Scooter," and those aren't even the best songs on the album. Great, great rock album from start to finish.

Blonde by Frank Ocean. It [had been] so long since he put out any music and every song was curated perfectly. Everything flows together beautifully and he is an amazing, creative genius.

Joanne by Lady Gaga because she's been an icon of my generation for a really long time. She stripped herself down and let fans see who she was as a person with her family background. Anyone going through anything can relate to her music.

Songs in the Key of Life by Stevie Wonder. The very first favorite song I had when I was 7 was "Isn't She Lovely" from that album. Not only is that still one of my favorite songs over 40 years later, but every song on that album is great.
