

did annual live productions of the beloved cult classic, and later the Maltese Tap Room offered showings of the cinematic version—The Rocky Horror Picture Show—of the story of two squares who become stranded and lose their innocence at the wild mansion of transvestite scientist Dr. Frank-N-Furter. Those venues are unfortunately gone, but Birdcage Theatre is bringing The Rocky Horror Show to Oroville State Theatre.

Oroville's Birdcage Theatre is picking up the mantle this year.

"It's one of the shows on everyone's bucket list [to perform in]," said Jennifer Beers, president of the Birdcage's board of directors, who will also be filling the role of Janet Weiss in the rock-'n'-roll musical. Beers said the decision to stage Rocky was partly inspired by the company's success with last year's Halloween season outing, Evil Dead The Musical.

"We sold out every one of the Evil Dead shows and people loved it," she said of the production directed by James Huie, who is also directing The Rocky Horror Show.

Also as it did for Evil Dead, the troupe is partnering with the 600-seat Oroville State Theatre to stage this production on a bigger stage. Beers said pre-sale tickets for the play, which runs October 27-29 and Nov 2, 4, and 5, are already moving briskly.

"Be prepared!" Beers said when asked what attendees should know beforehand. "There's lots of adult content, people calling back [at the stage while] in costume. There will be drinks and prop bags available. It's gonna be a party." □
