“Distributing Truckee River water to the boundaries of our community takes pressure off our wells, saving groundwater for when it’s needed most.”

– Lauren Roaldson, Hydrogeologist
 Truckee Meadows Water Authority

This approach is called conjunctive use, and it makes the most of all our water resources above AND below ground. From the Mt. Rose Fan to the North Valleys, conjunctive use helps keep our water system robust and resilient through the peak season and offers flexibility in serving our needs for years to come.
