BEST PLACE FOR A FIRST DATE

TASTE OF CHICAGO

180 E. First St., 971-4462

When it comes to a first date, you've got choices to make—important choices. Too many people jump immediately to expensive fine dining experiences for first dates. And it's a mistake. Many smart people—RN&R's advice columnist, Amy Alkon, included—think that a first date should be a few simple things: local, cheap and short. You want to go on a great first date? Ask him/her/them if they want to go to Taste of Chicago for a hot dog. The dogs are good. The—basically domestic only—beers are served ice cold. You can play the crane machine and pinball games while you wait for your food—and, best of all, you'll walk out the door with bellies full of franks and beer for a whole lot less than if you make your first date an awkward, $30-plates affair.
