

ASKED IN BARNES & NOBLE AT ARDEN FAIR:

What are you reading lately?

KATELYN DOWLING
administrative assistant

Right now, I'm reading about five books, and the ones I can remember the title of are: Austenland, The Piano Tuner and Amy Schumer's biography. I start getting an urge to read a specific type of book at different times so I just pick up a new one. So, it's a bit of an endless cycle.

The science fiction classics, and the one I'm looking at right now is The Once and Future King, which is a bit more fantasy. If you have seen [the movie] The Sword in the Stone, it's a tale of King Arthur and Camelot and the betrayal of Lancelot. I think it's good to read the classics.

I'm re-reading Howl's Moving Castle by Diana Wynne Jones and I originally read it because I really enjoy the Studio Ghibli [movie], and I thought it would be interesting to see the original concept. The book and the movie are nothing alike and I love that because there's a distinction.

JESSICA SHEPARD

I'm reading a motivational book called 100 Days to Brave, and it's basically about accepting yourself, learning your strong suits and how to build yourself back up. I think [motivational books] are important to read because they help people get inspired ...
