ASKED AT NEW HELVETIA BREWING COMPANY ON BROADWAY:

What would you invent?

DAVID GULL
company owner

I'm going lightsaber or teleporter ... If I had to pick one, I'd probably pick the teleporter. I think it's way more useful than a lightsaber.

SOPHIA WILHELM
student

Some way [for everyone to easily] purify water. It could have multiple uses, especially in developing countries where water is so difficult to get but also when you're camping.

JAY DEGUZMAN
salesperson

I'm stuck in traffic a lot. Uninventive as it might sound, I would like to invent—before Elon Musk comes out with it next year because I think he's doing it—the floating car or the flying car.

AL GOLDBERG
marketing director

Chinese food burrito drive-thrus. Cause sometimes you want Chinese food and you're driving in your car. You can't just break out a fork or chopsticks and eat in your car.

SPENCER MOWERY
bartender

An app that tells you where the best public restrooms are. That'd work really well in San Francisco.

driver

You know how they have the 3-D printers? I wonder ... if there's an invention where you could say, "This is what I want to eat," and it just appears in front of you.
