

ASKED AT CESAR CHAVEZ PLAZA:

Thoughts on presidential election coverage?

TERRY CROWNOVER
retired

I read a lot every single day from a variety of sources. It's just gotten crazy this year, maybe more so than most years.

MICHELLE BERMUDEZ
health care worker

I don't have a problem with it. I think it gives us important information, and information that sometimes we don't get watching from the TV.

JOHN HARRISON
state worker

I think the media's doing a very wide range of coverage. You can see a lot of sides of the point of view, if you actually spend the time to look for it.

MARIE BUSH
state worker

The only media that I even look at in terms of any kind of politics is BBC ... I feel like that's the only way I'm going to get something that's actually unbiased.

ALLISON BELDEN
state worker

The media right now is all-encompassing ... We're now talking about targeted ads ... with obvious misinformation and hot-button words ... that trigger feelings of anger. And that, I think, is problematic.

resident

I think it's fantastic, it's great. Just letting the people know what's going on, as far as what's going on with the president, all the Democrats and the senators and all that other stuff.
